#14, "The Trail of Vengeance"

Jack, rescuing the record book from the fire, sees McBride turn the cannon and rushes off with Olga just as the house is blown to atoms. Jack appeals on behalf of the citizens to the captain of the troops to protect them against McBride's villainy. The officer tells Jack he is unable to aid, as he is there only to obey "Judge" Hands' orders, but says if Standing can get in touch with a higher authority, he'll do the best he can. McBride threatens Johnson and tells him he'll be held responsible for Scully's death.

Standing sets out to find a traveling Federal judge who will help him aid the oppressed citizens. McBride tries to win Olga's confidence but is unsuccessful. His girl accomplice sees him with her and, later, leaves in a jealous rage, threatening to reveal all to the authorities. Knocked down by a runaway horse, she is carried by Olga into the Petrof cabin where she tells Olga McBride is following Jack with a gang of men. Setting out to warn Jack, Olga is seen by some of McBride's henchmen but she eludes them and manages to draw off Jack's pursuers. McBride and Jack fight above a steep chasm, both sitting on a log. One end of the log is jarred loose and slips.
